ESINO Valley

Esino Valley is characterized by a hilly landscape spreading from the hinterland to the coast, in a beautiful scenario where nature and man harmoniously mix up.

Many Medieval castles look down on the hills where Esino river flows, picturing a breathtaking view to the passerby towns and villages still develop around the ancient castles. Grape vines embellish hills and offer delicious wine to taste.

Routes of monasteries / ancient centers of culture

*For centuries monasteries have represented the cradle of civilization.
They were important centers of production and diffusion of culture.*

Throughout the Esino Valley, take time to admire the magnificent monasteries, ancient centers of spirituality and culture.

Collective life, culture and knowledge, respect for territory and hospitality are the values coming from Benedictine culture. This set of values are still vivid in the surrounding territory and in Loccioni Group spirit as well.

NEAR

The Valley

Esino Valley is the heart of Marche Region, overlooking the Adriatic Sea.

The name “Marche” derives from the plural treasures, name of marca, originally referring to the Medieval marches.

Discovering the Marche Region means taking a route in search of beauty, visiting a land of excellence, with hidden waiting to be enjoyed.

Senigallia

Senigallia, founded by the Senones Gauls, is a city where sea and history intertwine between rolling hills (Misa Valley) and the sea: the famous 'velvet beach' is home to the Rotonda a Mare, built in the 19th century and now a venue for events.

Over the years, it was contested between the Malatesta family and the Della Rovere family, who created the splendid Rocca Roveresca fortress.

It is the birthplace of photographer Mario Giacomelli, famous for his intense black-and-white shots of the Marche countryside. Every summer, the city comes alive with the Summer Jamboree Festival, with its 1940s and 1950s atmosphere.
